

Consultant/Hydrogeologist West Midlands £Competitive

We are working with a leading UK and International Environmental Consultancy who are looking for an experienced hydrogeologist to perform project management support to the application standard principles and evaluate and select methods of basic project work and apply specialist technical skills to complex and multidisciplinary assignments. This varied role will also require the successful candidate to undertake the application of risk assessment models to assess potential risks in controlled water, environment and human health areas that are associated with land and groundwater contamination and provide to technical support whilst checking the work of other team members, undertake geological, hydrological and hydrogeological and land quality condition assessments across a wide range of sectors including industrial, waste facilities, and mineral associated and prepare databases of field and laboratory information, record and manage data in various formats, carry out the analysis and presentation of data in accordance with the company quality management systems and information prepared by other colleagues.

To be considered for this role you must have a BSc, MSc or MSci in Geology or Earth Sciences, ideally also hold a MSc in Hydrogeology or related discipline, be computer literate with good knowledge of specialist risk assessment & hydrogeological modelling software, and you must have a clean driving license.

For the full requirements and duties for this position contact Rebecca on 0845 258 7583 or via the email address below with your current CV attached and the Job Ref: RB1871

