

Senior Process Development Engineer

South East

£Competitive

We are working with a recycling company who have the opportunity for an experienced Senior Process Development Engineer to join an award winning team based in the South East and become a key member of the product and commercial development team.

Reporting directly to the Chief Technology Officer you will take on responsibility for a number of tasks including but not limited to; directing the design, research and development of the new products from initial concepts through to prototyping, pre-production and final release, identifying third party partners, contributing to invention disclosures, patents and publications and liaising with engineering/operations team regarding processes for front end handling as well as a number of others tasks as required.

To be considered you will have a Masters degree in Chemical Engineering or related engineering discipline, ideally have chartered chemical engineer status, have a minimum of 3 years industrial experience in process, product development and ideally within the food and beverage sector, be experienced in process design, scaling up to full plant design and commissioning and be at expert level with processing and formulation equipment/plant layouts and concepts/procedures for equipment design and sizing.

For full details email your current CV to Rebecca@candovergreen.com stating job ref: RB2139

