Environmental Data Analyst

North Yorkshire   £-Attractive

We are working with a well-established environmental consultancy. They now have the requirement for an addition to their winning team based in North Yorkshire. Your role will be an integral part of the compliance team delivering the companies packaging data management service with a focus on continual improvement and ensuring adaptability to change. To provide a high-quality data service to customers through the collection and synthesis of data and maintenance of accurate weights database with a focus on maximising use of internal systems. Providing technical support to the customer support and sales team as required. You will be responsible for but not limited to; the delivery of packaging data management service to involve the collection and analysis of data (working with customer support team/direct with customers to understand member requirements); Drive continuous improvement of data management jobs - including; the development of methodologies, implementation of audit recommendations, weights gathering; maintenance of accurate customer weights databases; delivery of quarterly plastic tax data management for customers; data analysis reporting to members; providing complex data support to Sustainable Packaging Consultancy service; developing strategies to drive data process efficiencies, working closely with Data Management Service Leader; provide technical and data support to customers/customer support team. In order to be considered for the role you will be proficient with Microsoft Office with strong Excel skills being able to use complex formulae. You will have a logical and methodical approach with an eye for detail with the ability to synthesis large data sets. You will have strong problem solving and creative thinking skills and the ability to prioritise, multi-task and manage time effectively. You will have the confidence to challenge when required, comfortable working independently but also work well in a team with a 'muck in' approach. Being flexible and highly resilient, you will be committed to growing with the business through a period of transformational change. You must have a strong work ethic working well under pressure with excellent organisational skills and the ability to meet deadlines. Knowledge of SQL databases would be advantageous, but not compulsory.

For full details, please email a copy of your CV to
Rebecca@candovergreen.com quoting job ref: RB2580