

Environmental Data Analyst
North Yorkshire      £-attractive + excellent benefits

I am working with a well-established Environmental Consultancy who have a new and exciting opportunity for an outgoing, intelligent, confident and enthusiastic person to join a dynamic, growing team as an Environmental Data Analyst based in North Yorkshire. The main purpose of this role is to deliver the company packaging data management service with a focus on continual improvement and ensure adaptability to change. To provide a high-quality data service to customers through the collection and synthesis of data and maintenance of accurate weights databases with a focus on maximising use of internal systems. Providing technical support to the customer support and sales team as required. Some of your responsibilities will be but not limited to; Delivery of packaging data management service - to involve the collection and analysis of data (working with customer support team/direct with customers to understand member requirements); Drive continuous improvement of data management jobs - including, the development of methodologies, implementation of audit recommendations, weights gathering; Maintenance of accurate customer weights databases; Delivery of quarterly plastic tax data management for customers; Data analysis reporting to members; Provide complex data support to Sustainable Packaging Consultancy service; Develop strategies to drive data process efficiencies, working closely with Data Management Service Leader; Provide technical and data support to customers/customer support team. In order to be considered for this role you will be proficient with Microsoft Office with strong Excel skills being able to use complex formulae; you will have a logical and methodical approach with an eye for detail with the ability to synthesis large data sets; you will have strong problem solving and creative thinking skills and the ability to prioritise, multi-task and manage time effectively; you will have the confidence to challenge when required, comfortable working independently but also work well in a team with a 'muck in' approach; you will have a strong desire to work for a business for good and will be committed to growing with the business through a period of transformational change, being flexible and highly resilient will support you with this; you must have a strong work ethic working well under pressure with excellent organisational skills and the ability to meet deadlines; knowledge of SQL databases would be advantageous, but not compulsory; a UK driving license will be required in order to carry out on-site customer visits.

For full details, please email a copy of your CV to rebecca@Candovergreen.com
quoting job ref: RB2624

